

Put down the camera, appreciate the moment and feel your environment. Is life always, centered on and filtered through LCD screens? Do you structure your days, events and vacations around capturing, collecting and managing your experiences as data on your computer? Put down the camera for yourself, but also for others whose actions you monitor, treat as a spectacle and watch. Spectator life, living vicariously through others expressions, movements and actions—the internalization and reproduction of the lesson taught by televisions, computers and fences. Consumed by work, people forget how to live their lives, instead choosing to walk around taking pictures of everything, capturing the world around them to be hoarded in their personalized digital world. Please resist your transformation into a data collection machine, and focus on making, living and doing as opposed to documenting, (digital) remembering and capturing.
